We believe that everyone deserves to have their personal data protected, but we also understand that data protection and cyber security aren't the key drivers of many businesses. We provide our clients with turnkey cyber-security solutions based on their business needs, taking away the hassle of monitoring the IT estate for malware, viruses, updates and management of email security. Similarly, we work with our clients to provide a pragmatic approach to fulfilling obligations around data protection. Protecting the data of your customers, clients and staff shouldn't mean that you have to buy the "latest, greatest" technology or start your business from scratch. We can help you to tune your business only where necessary - we have often improved efficiency and/or saved cost. Data protection shouldn't be an open cheque-book to consultants. We work with you, at your pace, with your resources and with a selection of tools which means that once we are complete, you shouldn't need to call on the services of a data protection consultant for your day-to-day business.
